1967 Summer Sessions

The College

The College of the San Francisco Art Institute, formerly the California School of Fine Arts, was founded in 1874 and is the oldest art school in the western United States. Since 1926, the College has been located on its own Russian Hill campus, only a few minutes from downtown San Francisco. An affiliate of the University of California, the Art Institute's College is fully accredited by the Western Association of Schools and Colleges and by the National Association of Schools of Art to grant the Bachelor of Fine Arts and Master of Fine Arts degrees. The summer program offers a broad selection of courses in the fine arts, plus a special workshop in photography. The classes are taught by artists who are widely recognized as leaders in their fields. The courses have been selected to augment the regular studies of art students and to satisfy the needs of professional artists, teachers and others who wish a concentrated period of summer study.

Photography Workshop
July 7-16

Gerald Burchard, Imogen Cunningham, Ernst Haas, Frederick Sommer, Blair Stapp

Daily, including weekends, from July 7 through July 16. Three units. Criticism and instruction from some of America's most eminent photographers; field trips throughout the San Francisco Bay Area during the day; critiques and discussion in the evenings. Individual darkrooms will be provided for black and white processing and printing; special arrangements have been made for rapid commercial processing of color film. The workshop is for professionals and advanced students of photography who wish to work in either black and white or color. It will be limited in size and restricted to photographers who have already developed a proficiency in the medium. Applicants must submit a resume and examples of recent work by July 1, 1967. Application forms are available from the Registrar at the Art Institute.

Gerald Burchard received his BFA degree in photography at the San Francisco Art Institute. After an interval of working in New York, he returned to San Francisco and has taught at the Art Institute for the past year. His photographs have been exhibited at the San Francisco Museum of Art.

Imogen Cunningham began to take photographs in 1901 while studying at the University of Washington. With a scholarship she studied photography at the Technische Hochschule in Germany, and, soon after returning to America in 1910, won national recognition for her portraits and pictorial work. In San Francisco, where she has lived for the past four decades, she joined the Group f/64 founded by Ansel Adams and Willard Van Dyke. Her photographs have been published and exhibited throughout the world with widespread critical acclaim.

Ernst Haas, who has been hailed as one of the most celebrated, influential and individualistic photographers of his generation, is best known today for his work in color, which was first published in a 24-page essay on New York in Life magazine. Subsequently his color photographs have been shown in a one man exhibit at the Museum of Modern Art. His black and white work includes numerous documentary assignments for magazines and widely published portraits of George Bernard Shaw, Nehru and Alfred Einstein. He lives in New York.

Frederick Sommer was born in Italy and raised in Rio de Janeiro. He came to the United States in 1925 to study architecture at Cornell, took up photography and has lived in Prescott, Arizona, since 1935. His photographs have been widely published and exhibited.

Blair Stapp received his bachelors degree from the University of Wisconsin and studied at the San Francisco Art Institute, where he is presently chairman of the photography department. He was formerly on the staffs of Edward Steichen and Milton Halberstadt and his editorial and advertising photographs have appeared in numerous publications.
